Little Marvel Gas Maker

Is proving a winner

We are still in business and are proving to the people of Albuquerque that the Little Marvel Gas Maker saves money, saves work, saves dirt and worry and saves time. We would like to prove to every housekeeper in Albuquerque the merits of the Little Marvel Gas Maker. We can show you gas makers now in operation or we can demonstrate in your own stove in your own home.

The Santa Fe railway is sending coaches and chair cars from all points on the western lines to El Paso for use in transporting the Mexican prisoners now held at Fort Bliss to Fort Wingate, near Gallup. The 218 cavalrymen on their way from Denver to Wingate to guard the prisoners are not expected to reach here until sometime tomorrow. They left Denver yesterday morning, but are traveling on a freight schedule, and stops will have to be made to take off the horses for feed, water and exercise. The government wants the animals in good condition when they arrive at Fort Wingate.

MAYOR IS PLANNING TO START WORK OF ADMINISTRATION

Financing City Hall Construction One of Many Matters He Is Considering. Busy Council Session Expected.

Work on the concrete exterior of the city hall building was completed this afternoon, and workmen began taking down the frame tower used in connection with the pouring of the cement mixture. Except for the laying of floors in the basement and the fire department all the cement work on the structure is finished.

The next step in the laying of the asbestos roofing, for which sufficient money still remains in the building fund.

Mayor D. H. Boatright said this morning that he had under consideration plans for the further financing of the construction work. The subject may be taken up at the regular meeting of the city council next Monday night, but the mayor was not certain of that. There were many matters of municipal business to carry forward, he said, and he did not know just what would or would not be brought up.

The mayor is anxious to get down to the administration of the general business of the city with the council, and he hopes to make a start next Monday night.

As to the particular question involved in the financing of the city hall construction the mayor has gone into the subject carefully and is by now more or less thoroughly familiar with the situation and the problem it presents. He has inspected the building several times with City Engineer Gladding, and knows in general just what has been accomplished and what remains to be done.

Don't forget the special sale at the Bartley Millinery Friday and Saturday.
